Post-War Program

Airways Communications
BY COL. WALLACE G. SMITH, USAF
Commanding Officer, Airways and Air
Communications Service

THE Airways and Air Communications Service is the Air Force organization charged with the mission of operating airways communications, including electronic navigational aids, along such airways as military traffic justifies.

Col. Smith

The U. S. Air Force is relatively young, but airways communications are even younger. For though the Air Force is only 41 years old, its airways communications are only ten. So young are they, in fact, that prior to World War II, an adequate system of airways communications capable of supporting military operations under all weather conditions was not available.

Yet, this deficiency was recognized as early as 1934 by General Arnold as a result of his leading a flight of B-10 aircraft from the U. S. to Alaska and return, together with a subsequent maneuver involving a flight of B-10's from March Field, California, to Langley Field, Virginia, in connection with participation in a simulated attack on Ft. Dix, New Jersey.

In those days airways communications consisted of a series of radio ranges and rotating light beacons operated by the CAA. Communication between the ground and aircraft was restricted for the most part to short-distance voice contacts with the radio range stations. Messages from base of departure to base of arrival were sent via Western Union. Planes nearly always arrived at bases without previous knowledge on the part of base authorities. An airways system outside the U. S. was non-existent.

The increased mobility of the B-10 aircraft had a marked effect on military strategy and gave farseeing people the first idea of the major role to be played by the Air Force in future wars. Needless to say, communications support was recognized as being essential to the eventual success of air power.

Communications for military aircraft had become a problem of such proportions by November of 1938 that it was necessary to organize an airways communications system distinct from the purely ground administrative facilities of the Signal Corps and the civil air route facilities operated by CAA.

Thus, a new organization was formed. It was called the Army Airways Communications System—short title AACCS. Its official name now is the Airways and

Regulations to Retire
Reserves Nearly Ready

Final preparations were being made this week for publication by all the Services of regulations prescribing methods for awarding retired pay to reservists who have reached the age of 60 and who have completed 20 years creditable service.

Meantime, the Joint Armed Services Committee to Recommend Rules and Procedures for Administering Title III of Public Law 810, which authorizes the retired payments to reservists, has recommended that it be continued in existence.

Capt. W. B. Tucker, USN, is chairman. Other members are Col. R. J. Clizbe, USAF; Capt. C. A. Anderson, USCG; Lt. Col. L. B. Woodbury, Jr., USA, and Maj. L. E. Pike, USMC.

The Committee said that certain questions came to light which may justify or make desirable the revision of the Act in certain respects. Specifically cited were these three questions:

1. Should legislation be sought extending the benefits of the Act to those who met all its requirements prior to separation but who are now completely separated from all the Services?
2. Should the requirements of the Act that the last eight years of qualifying service be in "a" Reserve component be broadened to include service in "any" Reserve component? This, said the Committee, has particular application to the Coast Guard Reserve which is not yet eight years old.
3. Should service performed prior to enactment of the Act, terminated by a separation other than honorable conditions, continue to be classified as satisfactory service?

Service Pay Report

Whether the report of the Commission on Service Pay would be made public before Christmas or even before the end of the year remained problematical late this week.

The last "i" was dotted and "t" crossed by executive assistants of the Commission this week. Then, the report was to be sent to members for final approval before being presented to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

This means that it probably will not be sent to the Government Printing Office until the latter part of next week. Presumably, because of its importance, the report will be given a high priority at the GPO.

Then it would be ready for release. However, the possibility exists that simultaneously with release of the report, the Secretary of Defense and Director of the Bureau of the Budget will make known their legislative proposals concerning increased pay for Service personnel. If this is done, conceivably publication of the report could be delayed until January.

AIR FORCE NON-COMs

A list of Air Force staff sergeants and technical sergeants promoted to the ranks of technical sergeant and master sergeant is printed on page 447.

AF Permanent Promotions

As an Air Force selection board began its second week of deliberations to study records of officers for permanent promotions to lieutenant colonel, major and captain, the number in each rank to be considered was made available.

Air Force officials said 69 majors are eligible for promotions to be made on or after 1 Jan. 1949. Also to be considered are 97 permanent captains and 1,380 permanent first lieutenants. A list of the officers being considered for selection is printed in this issue beginning on page 436.

As results of the selection process are released, the lists will be published in their entirety in future issues of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Adm. Denfeld's First Year as CNO

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, who relieved Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz as Chief of Naval Operations on 15 Dec. 1947, will complete his first year as CNO next week.

Under Admiral Denfeld's leadership, the Naval Establishment has undergone numerous changes. Chief Among these is the emphasis which has been placed on undersea warfare, and the construction of "prototype" vessels.

Early in 1948, a program was instituted to streamline and equip a number of fleet submarines with an improved version of the German "schnorkel" breathing tube, to increase their submerged speed. Anti-submarine warfare and hunter-killer techniques were also expanded. Recently the effectiveness of these new prototypes was demonstrated in the Argentina exercises off the coast of Newfoundland, and Admiral Denfeld announced that undersea warfare, both offensive and defensive, is the priority item in Navy planning.

Work was stopped on the guided missile bombardment ships, the Kentucky and the Hawaii, and all but one of the Navy's remaining active battleships were placed in the reserve fleet to make expansion possible in other directions.

A new construction and shipbuilding program was set up. To increase the range and striking power of the Navy's fast carrier task forces, plans were completed to begin construction of a giant, 65,000-ton aircraft carrier, capable of launching planes weighing up to 100,000 pounds. Conversion of two other aircraft carriers, the Essex and the Wasp, was also initiated, and plans were formulated to ultimately convert all aircraft carriers of the Essex class.

Personnel of the Naval Establishment climbed from 42,000 officers and 350,000 enlisted men, during Admiral Denfeld's year in office, to a combined figure of 426,365. Members of the Naval Reserve increased by more than 100,000, in line

Army Board Picks 531
Permanent Lt. Cols.

(The list of Regular Army permanent majors promoted to permanent lieutenant colonel will be found on the back page.)

The Army this week released the names of 527 regular promotion list permanent majors selected from 588 names for advancement to the permanent rank of lieutenant colonel on 1 Jan. 1949. Four chaplains were selected also for advancement to lieutenant colonel.

The President has approved the selection board recommendations and the promotions will become effective on that date.

Army officials said that if any additional promotions to the rank of permanent lieutenant colonel were to be made during 1949, another board would have to be convened. All those recommended for promotion at this time will be advanced simultaneously.

The total number of selections from the Army promotion list was 528, but one officer died subsequent to conclusion of the selection board's meetings. (The complete list of permanent majors was published in the 2 Oct. issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.)

This means that 60 officers were passed over, marking inauguration of the Army's permanent promotion system in which two passovers will lead to an officer's separation from active service.

Meantime, officials expressed the hope that the list of permanent captains selected for promotion to the rank of permanent major will be available for publication in next week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Simultaneously, they said that the board meeting to consider permanent first lieutenants for promotion to permanent captain was slated to conclude its deliberations this week.

Likewise, the board to select officers of the Medical Department for promotion to higher permanent ranks also has completed its task.

On the list of officers advanced to lieutenant colonel, two readjustments of relative position were made. Officials explained that the changes were the result of errors in the preparation of the original promotion list.

The selections extend from Maj. C. K. Fox, No. 1 on the promotion list to Maj. Andrew D. Kane, No. 594 on the promotion list.

It is noted that Major Kane, a Judge Advocate, will likely be transferred from the Army promotion list early next year, for a separate promotion list will be established for officers of the Judge Advocate General's Department on 1 Feb.

Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Parker, jr., The Provost Marshal General, was president of the board which selected the officers for permanent promotion to the rank of

ARMY-AIR FORCE WARRANTS

The supplemental list of warrant officers appointed in the Army and Air Force will be found on Page 441. The original list of 5153 Army and Air Force warrant appointments was published in the 27 Nov. issue of the Army and Navy Journal.

Asheville Citizen—"Senator Tydings wants the Armed Services to keep their budget requests within a limit of $15 billion. Senator Tydings is right: any greater defense bill must be 'justified.' Yet he and his budget-trimmers are at the mercy always of the unexpected event which is the secret advance agent of war."

Billings Gazette—"There is no possible excuse for the lack of a full comradeship in arms and complete coordination of efforts between the highest officer echelon of the three services. Any officer of any of the services who refuses to recognize this need should be instantly discharged. This rule should be applied to all ranks of the officer corps down to captains and lieutenants. A few summary and publicized discharges might have a salutary effect."

Baltimore News-Post—"... For much too long a time the Air Force was relegated to an inferior and subordinate position among our National Defense establishments. ... The authorization of a national air force academy, as Secretary Forrestal now urges ... should be one of the first acts of the new Congress. It will be an important factor in assuring the peace and security and happiness of the country."

Evansville Courier—"A proposal to establish an Air Force academy will be presented to congress in the coming session. ... The ideal arrangement might be ... an academy ... for the air force, and then a system set up under which every cadet and midshipman would spend a year at each of the other two schools before entering his own academy for the final two years. This might produce, in a generation or two, corps of officers who would have a thorough understanding of all the services and would think in terms of joint operations."

New York Times—"... Announcement by the Army that it was forced to scale back its planned manpower requirements ... looks very much like the first salvo of a campaign to persuade Congress to give the Army a larger slice of defense money. If the Army is starting this early to influence Congressional opinion to its side of the argument ... will the Navy and the Air Force be far behind with like maneuvers? ... If there is real 'unified thinking' in the National Military Establishment we believe a pretty good defense apparatus can be built at a cost of $15,000,000,000 a year."

Philadelphia Inquirer—"Secretary Forrestal, by his statement urging that military equipment be furnished the nations of western Europe, has pointed up an issue which in the coming months will be of the gravest importance to the United States. ... In making up our minds on this momentous question, we should bear in mind that our own economy must not be undermined by exaggerated commitments to aid others. That would simply be playing the Soviet game."

Air Communications Service.

At its inception AACCS was given responsibility for establishing 33 stations consisting of a combination of control towers, ground/air and point-to-point radio facilities in the United States. A total of 3 officers and 300 enlisted men was authorized. This can be compared with the peak of the organization on VJ Day when AACCS had become a world-wide system totaling 786 stations comprised of 5,435 various facilities manned by 4,500 officers and 45,500 enlisted men operating in 104 different countries.

These facilities were: point-to-point and ground-to-air radio stations; air-drome control towers, electronic aids to navigation, such as radio ranges, direction finders, homing beacons, radar beacons, marker beacons, instrument landing systems and Loran; aeronautical land-line facilities and teletype stations; communications stations for transmitting and collecting weather information, and necessary cryptographic sections and message centers.

AACCS operates under the Systems Concept, a concept based on two fundamentals: First, that success in operating fixed communications facilities varies in direct ratio to the degree that activities at one location are coordinated and integrated with similar activities at other locations. Second, that coordination and integration, as well as uniformity of operations, are best achieved by establishing the requisite communications facilities as a system at the highest possible command level for the particular situation concerned.

Under the Systems Concept, communications is a function of command only at the level where the particular communications system is controlled. There must be some provision for management of communications as an integrated whole. If one chooses to exercise this management through the normal command channel the commander must delegate sufficient authority to permit the communications officer to exercise a measure of direct control, particularly along technical and operational lines. It is in this field of management that a good many commanders fail to discharge properly their responsibilities. Too many of them regard communications as a purely technical function consisting of highly specialized equipments and gadgets operated by a weird assortment of technicians.

In order to explain more clearly the Systems Concept as it finds expression in AACCS, I wish to point out an analogy to be found in a big business organization.

There are literally hundreds of local telephone companies in the U. S.—more than 900 actually—which serve communities of various sizes. But, there is only one American T.&T. system to handle long-distance calls. You can imagine how much long distance service you would get if you depended for it on coordination between several hundred local companies. It is doubtful that there would ever be agreements as to which company would construct the wire lines between the companies—let alone solve the problems of operation.

Fortunately for the U. S., American T.&T. takes care of all that by building interconnecting lines and working out rate schedules, routing instructions, operating procedures and a number of other details which are necessary to enable any local telephone subscriber to call any other phone in the U. S. and even overseas.

A collection of local phone companies never could do a job of that kind. In other words, the American T.&T. is a working example of the Systems Concept as applied to the telephone business. Now, with this analogy in mind, let us examine our version of this concept.

The purpose of AACCS, in brief, is to support the movement of Air Force aircraft between various bases or wherever the United States Air Force flies. With the first call from the control tower, the flight becomes an inter-base proposition. It is like a long distance phone call.

The pilot on the normal flight will use the tower during the take-off; he will check his progress with various aids, such as homing beacons, radio ranges, and Direction Finding stations; he will communicate for various reasons with air-ground stations en route and he will be assisted in landing at his destination by one or all of the electronic aids, such as radio range, ground control approach, traffic control and the control tower.

All this goes on while the point-to-point networks pass messages concerning the flight by teletype or radio telegraph and collect weather information for forecasting purposes. All these services, together, are designed for the safe and expeditious movement of the flight. No one of the components just mentioned can be pulled out without weakening the system.

AACCS as one of the support services of MATS also handles a vast quantity of world-wide routine military communications in its continuing attempts to minimize the hazards of flying, and provides the largest user of its facilities, the Air Weather Service, with communications for the collection and dissemination of weather information.

AACCS's present organization, with Headquarters in Washington, D. C., consists of the 1800th Wing, headquartered at Langley Field, Virginia, with three groups covering the Continental United States; the 1808th, or Pacific Wing, consisting of two groups and headquartered in Tokyo; and the 1807th, or European Wing, headquartered in Wiesbaden, Germany. Additionally, three independent Groups cover Alaska, Newfoundland, and the Caribbean areas, with headquarters at Elmendorf Field, Alaska; Fort McAndrew, Newfoundland; and Ramey Air Force Base, P. R., respectively. An independent Loran Liaison Unit maintains and operates this aeronautical navigational aid in the Arctic.

Today, the efficiency and speed with which AACCS meets changing commitments is being dramatized in Operation "Vittles." During the past month, AACCS technicians averaged a radio contact with a plane every 15 seconds around the clock. At Tempelhof—easily the world's busiest airport—the tower is averaging better than one radio contact per minute.

When planes began ferrying food into Berlin June 26 on a 24-hours-a-day, seven-days-a-week schedule, AACCS men, along with other support services of MATS, immediately went into action.

Planes, pilots, supplies, communications, navigational aids and all the varied and complex equipments necessary to support the most dramatic demonstration of peacetime power rallied to relieve a besieged Berlin.

In less than three weeks, 17 radio beacons went on the air to guide U. S. and British pilots along the narrow corridors. Control tower operators were given intensive training as traffic figures soared. Ground-controlled approach stepped up operations. In one month, the Wiesbaden GCA landed more than 3,000 aircraft.

An indication of the tremendous task facing AACCSmen world-wide are these figures for June and September. Landings and take-offs were approximately 22,000 in June and had increased to 54,000 in September. Ground-to-air contacts doubled from 30,000 in June to 60,000 in September. Radio contacts skyrocketed from 50,000 in June to 140,000 in September.

Today, AACCS air-drome control on the "Vittles" project is so competent that the big airlift transports land, discharge their cargoes and are back in the air again—all within an hour.

"Vittles" is producing a lot of radio-conscious pilots. The mere fact that AACCS, with its network of radio, radar and electronic aids is standing by is a big mental boost. To tighten an aircraft through the corridor is no cinch, but with the beacons and ranges, and Ground Control Approach, the job is made easier. Vittles pilots speak at once a literal and figurative truth when they say: "The shortest distance between two points is AACCS."

USS Missouri to Remain Active

The USS Missouri, lone battleship in active service with the U. S. Fleet, will not be relegated to "mothballs" according to President Harry S. Truman.

The President told reporters in Norfolk, where he attended the presentation of a $10,000 silver service to the battleship, that "the Missouri will not be taken out of commission." Mr. Truman said that "some smart aleck who poses as a spokesman for the Navy" had made the statement that the Missouri would retire, but that he, "speaking as the President of the United States," denied the story. The President told reporters that he wanted to make the statement as strong as he could make it.

Mr. Truman had journeyed to Norfolk aboard the Presidential Yacht Williamsburg, together with Mrs. Truman, their daughter Margaret, the Governor of Missouri and Mrs. Phil Donnelly. All but Mrs. Truman were present aboard the battleship as Governor Donnelly presented a 281-piece silver service from the people of his state to the Missouri's skipper, Captain James Thach.

Governor Donnelly revealed, in the presentation speech, that the original idea for the gift came from President Truman.

The President made a brief speech on the quarterdeck of the 45,000-ton battleship, in which he labeled the mighty vessel "the most historic battleship of all times." Mr. Truman recalled that his daughter Margaret had christened the ship in 1944; that the Japanese surrender ceremony had taken place aboard the vessel; and that he had made the return trip from the 1947 Rio de Janeiro conference aboard the battleship.

Board Elects Gen. Echols

The Board of Governors of the Aircraft Industries Association on 4 Dec. reelected Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols (U.S.A.F., Ret.) as President to serve until a successor is chosen.

General Echols, some months ago, was elected chairman of the Board of Northrup Aircraft, Inc., and will assume that post on 1 Feb., but under the AIA's action he will retain title as president of the Association until a successor is chosen. Meanwhile the AIA Board announced that Capt. Leland D. Webb, USN (Ret.), vice president in charge of their Western office, will come to Washington to serve as acting General Manager. The West Coast office will be temporarily in charge of Captain Webb's assistant, John M. Richards.

In addition to reelecting General Echols, the Board also reelected Eugene E. Wilson as Chairman of the Board and named the following Vice Presidents: J. H. Kindelberger, board chairman of North American Aviation, Inc., and Malcolm Ferguson, president of Bendix Aviation Corporation. Leland D. Webb was reelected Vice President, and Harrison Brand, Jr., was reelected Secretary-Treasurer.

New members of the AIA Board of Governors named at the Arrowhead Springs meeting were La Motte T. Cohn, president of Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp.; Chester H. Lang, vice president of General Electric Corp.; Frederick C. Crawford, president of Thompson Products Co.; and C. J. Reese, president of Continental Motors Corp. Mr. Cohn replaces Harry Woodhead, former Convair president now with Douglas Aircraft Co., and Mr. Reese replaces Dwane L. Wallace, president of Cessna Aircraft Company.

"Braking" Multi-Engine Craft in Flight

Curtiss-Wright Corporation on 30 Nov. demonstrated to military, airlines and government officials how reversible propellers can enable multi-engine aircraft to descend during emergency or procedure landings safely at rates exceeding 10,000 feet per minute with air speeds below 200 miles per hour.

An experimental development resulting from an extensive research and flight testing program by the company's Propeller Division, the new application involves reversing the thrust of the propellers on aircraft in flight, making it possible to more than double the aircraft's rate of descent—without increasing its forward speed or imposing an extraordinary stress upon its structure.

Mr. Guy W. Vaughan, president of Curtiss-Wright, recalled that the first practical reversible propeller for aircraft—a Curtiss electric produced by Curtiss-Wright Corporation's Propeller Division, which has pioneered such advancements as hollow steel blades, multi-engine synchronization and full-feathering—was installed and operated in 1939 on a Sikorsky XPB2S-1 Flying Boat to increase its water maneuverability. Five years later Curtiss announced the successful development and use of a reversible propeller on a land based aircraft, a B-17, the initial flight test having been initiated in 1943.

Medical Center Commander

Brig. Gen. Paul H. Streit, Commanding General of Brooke General Hospital at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., has been assigned to command of the Army Medical Center at Washington, D. C., it was announced by Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, the Army Surgeon General.

General Streit will assume command 15 Jan., succeeding Maj. Gen. George C. Beach, Jr., who died 18 Nov.

Born in Seguin, Texas, on 18 March 1891, General Streit attended the University of Texas and received his M. D. Degree from the Medical School of that university in 1916. On completing his internship at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston he joined the Regular Army Medical Corps as a first lieutenant, and went overseas with the 87th Division in October 1917. After the Armistice, having been promoted to captain, he took post-graduate nose and throat training at the University of Bordeaux, and on 1 Nov. 1919, joined the American Typhus Relief Expedition, with headquarters in Warsaw, and served till 1 Nov. 1920. He was then assigned to the Station Hospital in Coblentz, in the American Army of Occupation.

General Streit returned to the United States in 1921 and was assigned to Fort Benning Station Hospital. He was graduated from the Army Medical Field Service School in 1922, and from the Army Medical School in 1923. From then until 1925 he served as Chief of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Service at Jefferson Barracks, Missouri. Then, following one year of post-graduate training in the New York Post Graduate Hospital, he was assigned to the United States Army Dispensary in Washington, D. C., holding this post until 1929. During this period he passed the examination of the American Board of Otorhinolaryngology, being one of the first Medical Corps officers to be accepted as a member of that Board.

As a major, he took charge of the EENT Service at Sternberg General Hospital in Manila, from 1929 to 1931, and for the next four years held the same position at Fort Leavenworth (Kansas) General Hospital. From 1935 to 1938 he was Chief of EENT at the Army-Navy General Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark., and from then until 1942 at Letterman General Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco.

In the spring of 1942, the then Colonel Streit took command of the 147th General Hospital in Honolulu. From 1943 to 1945, he served as Surgeon of the Central Pacific Base Command, returning in the fall of 1945 to command Dibble General Hospital, the Army's blind and plastic center at Menlo Park, Calif. He has been Commanding General of Brooke General Hospital at Fort Sam Houston for the last three years.

General Streit was married to Metta Megeath in 1926. They have a son, John Paul Streit, 20, now in the second class at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, and a daughter, Metta Elizabeth, 15, attending St. Mary's School in San Antonio.

Secret Signalling System

U. S. Patent No. 2,455,443, covering a secret signalling system by which ordinary messages are converted to a succession of arbitrary symbols and transmitted by facsimile or television to a receiving and decoding terminal, has been issued to Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, President and Chairman of the Board of the Radio Corporation of America. Following the same practice of other inventors employed by the Corporation, General Sarnoff has assigned his patent to the RCA.

In one form of the invention, use is made of a special typewriter which prints pictorial characters or any arbitrarily chosen symbols instead of the common letters of the alphabet. After a message comprising the symbols has been transmitted by radio facsimile or television to the receiving terminal, it may be decoded either manually or automatically by alternate means revealed in the patent papers.

Under the manual method of translation at the receiver, an operator, using a typewriter equipped with keys carrying the symbols, reads the characters, depresses the proper keys and converts the message to its original text. The patent explains that sender and addressee, by prearrangement, may change the combination of symbols as often as necessary to insure secrecy, even when transmitted by a common radio carrier.

The manual method may be made automatic at the receiving point by adding coded impulses to each secret symbol at the time of facsimile transmission. When a message prepared in this manner reaches the receiver, the pulses accompanying each symbol actuate the key of an automatic printer to record the corresponding letter or figure on a moving tape.

Errors normally caused by static, fading of signals and similar troublesome conditions are overcome in General Sarnoff's invention through the ability of the receiving operator to recognize the distinctive characters even when they have been distorted in transmission.

Sec'y. Royall Addresses JA's

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall this week addressed a conference of 70 judge advocates gathered in Washington from all major units of the Army in the United States and in foreign theaters. Mr. Royall stressed the broad scope of the amendments of the Articles of War contained in Title II of the Selective Service Act of 1948, and the efforts of the Army to bring to the administration of military justice all the basic safeguards of civil criminal procedure with a minimum of technicalities.

He referred to improved and successful military appeal procedures advocated by the Army and continued in the revised Articles of War in lieu of suggested forms of civilian control, thus protecting the traditional military character of courts-martial. The conference of 70 officers is being held in the form of a seminar on the revised Army Manual for Courts Martial, with the personnel who actually made the revisions serving as instructors.

Secretary Royall told the conferees in part:

"Perhaps you know that there is now under way in the National Military Establishment a study looking to a more uniform code of military justice in all three of the Departments. It is possible that this will result in other legislation which may change, at least to some extent, the rules which you are now learning.

"We have been confronted throughout this entire program with one major misconception in the eyes of the public and in the eyes of the Congress. Civilian lawyers, as all of you perhaps were, have a tendency to want to apply the civilian system en masse to the military justice. We have had to combat that at all times. For it would incorporate in our Army system the technicalities which, in my opinion, tend to discredit the administration of justice in civil life. We have, by and large, succeeded in fighting that off and in preserving a truly military system of justice.

"Before my own North Carolina Bar Association, I once said, that in my opinion, if any reasonable man or group of men would compare the results of criminal courts in civil life with the results in Court Martial proceedings, they would find that we have the better system of justice in the Army."

Air Power Merger

Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, wartime Air Force leader, who resigned a regular commission to return to industry, stirred the Air Force-Navy air power controversy anew this week as he declared that "we actually have two self-sufficient, competing air forces, each planning to win the air war in its own way."

"We cannot afford this luxury—this prodigality," General Doolittle said in an article prepared for "Air Force Magazine," published by the Air Force Association.

General Doolittle urged an immediate merger of the Air Force and Naval aviation, maintaining it would save "unnecessary billions," now being "wasted."

He said there should be "an Army operating on the ground, a Navy operating on and under the water, and an Air Force operating in the air."

Under the plan advanced by General Doolittle, the Navy would operate aircraft carriers, but their planes would be manned by members of the combined Air Force, transferred from the Navy."

Air Reservist in Congress

A wartime hero of the Air Force will take his seat in the House of Representatives when Congress convenes next month.

In his new role, Col. Robert L. Coffey, Jr., USAF-Res., doubtless will be the nation's only "jet propelled Congressman."

A former fighter pilot with the 365th Fighter Group and a recognized expert in low-level bombing, Colonel Coffey is also a qualified pilot of jet propelled aircraft.

He was shot down in France during the war, but was able to affiliate himself with the French underground before joining elements of General George S. Patton's ground forces with whom he won a Bronze Star—one of his many wartime decorations.

Colonel Coffey resigned his regular Air Force commission on 1 Sept. and the next day accepted a commission as a colonel in the Reserve.

His brilliant military background is expected to prove of considerable importance in all Congressional debate affecting the National Military Establishment, particularly should Colonel Coffey win a seat on the Armed Services Committee.

Military Justice Manual

Following approval by President Truman and Secretary of the Army Royall, The Manual for Courts-Martial, U. S. Army, 1949, will be published within the next few weeks.

It will explain the sweeping changes in the administration of military justice to be initiated on 1 Feb. Publication of the revised manual completes a project for improvement in the administration of military justice, which was begun by Secretary Royall in 1946, when he was Under Secretary of War.

Meantime, Army commanders have prepared courses of instruction for enlisted personnel concerning the new procedures for military courts, on which enlisted men will serve. The new manual will be utilized as a text book for the special military justice classes.

Among other things under the amended Articles of War and the new Manual for Courts-Martial, which was revised under the direction of Secretary Royall, soldiers are made eligible to sit as members of general and special courts-martial when requested by the accused. This is an experiment which may enhance the confidence of enlisted persons in the basic fairness of court-martial action.

Coercion of courts martial is forbidden as is the use of any improper measure in securing confessions of accused persons. Involuntary confessions have previously been inadmissible before courts-martial, but the use of coercion or unlawful influence in obtaining a confession is now made a criminal offense. Procedures are changed to emphasize the presumption of innocence in trials by court-martial. Other procedural changes include the adoption for courts-martial of important features of the new Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Officers are made subject to trial by special courts-martial, and the disciplinary powers of commanders to punish officers without trial are substantially enlarged. Limitations upon punishment of enlisted persons are made generally applicable to officers.

The powers of military commanders to appoint courts martial, refer charges for trial and approve, disapprove, suspend or remit sentences are continued.

In addition to the many protections provided to accused individuals under the new articles, a guarantee of proper enforcement of the law is provided by two key changes—the requirement that the law member, the trial judge, be a qualified military lawyer, and the provision of a final appellate court of review to consist of military legal specialists with long experience in that field.

Under the amended Articles of War law members of general courts-martial must be militarily trained officers with professional legal education and training. They will serve for all practical purposes as trial judges. The exercise of their legal powers is designed to insure full compliance in every case with the rules of evidence and trial procedures which conform closely to the rules of evidence and the procedures of the Federal system of criminal jurisprudence.

There are not sufficient lawyers in the Army to provide legally qualified counsel for every accused, but the Congress, adopting the recommendation of Secretary Royall, enacted a requirement that in every case in which the trial judge advocate is a lawyer defense counsel of similar qualifications must be provided.

Automatic appellate review by Boards of Review in the Office of The Judge Advocate General, composed of officers of military experience and legal training, is to be provided in every case tried by general or special court-martial which involves a dishonorable or bad-conduct discharge. The confirming power is simplified and will be exercised in most cases in the Office of The Judge Advocate General by general officers of mature military and legal experience.

Under the recent reorganization of Headquarters, Department of the Army, The Judge Advocate General becomes a member of the Special Staff directly answerable to the Secretary of the Army, the Chief of Staff and Vice Chief of Staff. Continuity of Department of the Army policies in the administration of military justice is thus assured.

New Army Career Field Readied

Preparations for introduction of the Army Finance Career Field reportedly are nearly completed, with inauguration of the new career field tentatively slated about 1 March 1949.

Officers of the Personnel Research and Procedures Branch, Adjutant General's Office, are working with specialists of the Office, Chief of Finance and the Army Finance School, St. Louis, Mo.

They are preparing four sets of examinations for promotion of enlisted specialists to and within the first four grades. The four fields include finance clerk, disbursing specialist, fiscal specialist and audit specialist.

To assist the finance enlisted man, an orientation pamphlet is being prepared by the training branch of OCF's management division. This pamphlet, will contain a list of suitable DA self-study material prepared for a certain MOS and grade. The pamphlet will also contain a guide list of Army correspondence courses which may be of assistance to an individual in preparing himself for advancement.

An Army circular will be issued introducing the Finance career field and will outline the following: MOS descriptions; job descriptions; grading for certain MOS's; job progression; job proficiency examinations; job ladder showing advancement from basic training through any one of the fields of audit, disbursing or fiscal, to warrant officer; study outlines for self-improvement either by on-the-job training or correspondence courses; and selection for finance schools.

Army Trailer Sites

The Army has approved the appropriation of approximately $1,000,000 for the development of trailer camp facilities at four camps.

Simultaneously, it was reported this week that Army officials at the Pentagon are studying requests from Army commanders for additional funds for construction of trailer camp sites.

The Army is exploring the feasibility of providing facilities for utilizing trailers, which would be purchased individually by officers and enlisted personnel, as living quarters at camps where the housing shortage is particularly acute.

It has been suggested that the officers and enlisted personnel of the top three pay grades might pay about $95 a year for use of the trailer site, utilizing their rental allowances to amortize the cost of the trailer.

That $1,000,000 already has been authorized indicates the Army's determination to take whatever steps possible—within budget limitations—to alleviate the desperate housing shortage now existing at some installations in various sectors of the United States.

General Bradley on Leave

General Omar N. Bradley, USA, Army Chief of Staff, was on leave this week. He is scheduled to return to Washington by 20 Dec.

General Bradley reportedly is spending a major part of his leave hunting. He is acclaimed as one of the best wing shots in the Army.

Medical Service Corps

Army personnel officials indicated late this week that the number of Medical Service Corps officers receiving permanent promotions on 1 Jan. 1949 may be restricted.

It is believed that a reduced number of MSC officers will be promoted because of discrepancies in the promotion list. Apparently it will require Congressional action to remedy the situation.

What is at the root of the difficulty is the fact that in some grades of the MSC officers with longer periods of service are ranked junior to other officers who have not served as long.

And here is the explanation. Prior to enactment of legislation creating the Medical Service Corps in the Army and Navy in 1947, Army officers who were members of the Pharmacy Corps were promoted to the rank of captain after six years of service and to major after 12 years of service.

In May, 1947, officers integrated into the Pharmacy Corps, Regular Army, who had six years service were given the permanent rank of captain. However after the legislation creating the MSC, the next integration in October, 1947, saw officers receiving rank as follows: more than three years and less than 10 years service, first lieutenant; more than 10 years and less than 17 years service, captain; more than 17 years and less than 23 years, major.

This means that in October 1947 an officer with nine years and 11 months service was given the rank of first lieutenant and was placed behind officers with lesser service.

It is understood that consideration is being given to legislation which would permit the Army to rearrange the precedence order of its MSC officers within a particular grade in order to place the senior officer first. This would be a one-time readjustment and would not result in any promotions. That is to say, the senior first lieutenant possibly might have more service than the junior captain, even after the readjustment. However, within a particular rank, length of service would determine the precedence of selection.

This would prevent any duplication of a situation now existing where a considerable number of officers with less service are listed above majors with 17 years service, who are eligible for promotion to permanent rank of lieutenant colonel.

This would mean, however, that in order to reach these officers, the other officers above them on the promotion list who have less than 17 years service would have to be passed over. Readjustment of the precedence on the basis of length of service would terminate this problem.

The difficulty has come to the fore with the recent convening of a selection board to consider officers of the Medical Department for promotion to higher ranks. Presumably, until the problem of the MSC promotion list precedence is solved, selection boards would be handicapped in recommending personnel for promotion.

Army Temporary Promotions

The Army plans to give some of its officers higher temporary ranks soon after the first of the year, personnel officials reported this week.

At the present time, the number of advancements to be made is still uncertain. It now appears that there probably will be no temporary promotions to the ranks of colonel and lieutenant colonel. Temporary promotions will be given almost exclusively to the ranks of major, captain and first lieutenant.

Regular Army WAC

Col. Mary A. Hallaren has accepted the oath of office as the first woman officer in the Regular Army except for those in the Medical Department; the first Regular Army Basic Company of the Women's Army Corps was graduated yesterday at Camp Lee, Va.; and Army officials indicated this week that the list of approximately 200 WAC officers awarded Regular Army commissions will be released within the next two weeks.

General Omar N. Bradley told Colonel Hallaren, after she had been sworn in by Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell in the presence of Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall and other top Army officials, that "your appointment . . . is a tribute to all of the fine women of your branch who performed so well during the war years and who have since carried on with the same high purpose and resolve, thus making themselves an indispensable part of the regular military establishment."

Lt. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Director of Personnel and Administration, Department of the Army General Staff, gave the principal address at the graduation ceremony yesterday for 111 women from 26 States—one was from Canada—who completed the basic phase of Army training at the WAC Training Center, Camp Lee.

Meantime, it was explained that the approximately 200 WAC officers selected for Regular Army commissions represent only an initial group to win RA status. Supplemental lists will be published. Army officials said. The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL will carry the complete list of integrated WAC officers when it is made available.

Army Food Service Promotions

Army officials emphasized this week that promotions of Food Service personnel to the top enlisted grades will be made by Christmas.

Examinations for these promotions—first under the Army's career plan—were given in mid-November. World-wide reports of examination results are expected to reach the Pentagon late this week and early next week.

According to present plan, the Army will inform commanders on or about 16 Dec. of the cut-off mark for the examinations and will authorize the promotion of all personnel who made that grade or better. At the same time, the Army will announce the number of promotions to be made as a result of the unprecedented tests.

When you move, notify the Army and Navy Journal of your change of address so you will not miss any issues.

Submarine Escape Device

The Navy revealed this week that it has developed a new submarine escape device which will make it possible to permit rescue of personnel from greater depths than modern submarines can go.

The announcement was made by Rear Adm. Charles B. Momsen, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Undersea Warfare, in an address in New York City at the 59th Annual Dinner of the Naval Order of the United States.

Admiral Momsen declared "that the Navy now has perfected a means of rescuing entrapped personnel from a sunken submarine from any depth to which a submarine may go without being crushed." He pointed out that "a recent successful test of this method climaxes the work of more than twenty years," and added that "today, a submarine man has an excellent chance of being rescued from a damaged submarine provided the damage which causes her sinking has not also destroyed the safety devices."

The new equipment, according to the Assistant CNO, "consists of a releaseable buoy at either end of the surface and carries with it a wire of sufficient strength to haul down the rescue chamber. Thus, the rescue operation by use of the rescue chamber is no longer dependent upon having a diver descend to great depths to attach the haul-down wire."

Admiral Momsen also told his audience that "anti-submarine war of the future will take four principal forms"—bombing of submarine bases, assembly yards, and manufacturing complexes; mining of harbors and passages of egress; destruction of the submarine on the high seas; and destruction of the submarine's weapon—the torpedo.

He emphasized, however, "that we will not be seriously hampered by submarines in carrying out our missions in the next few years," and expressed his confidence "that the great American team of technology, industry, and the Naval service will be capable of meeting the issue when it arises. Given the proper support," he said, "your Navy will control the seas as long as it is to our best interest to do so."

Col. William F. Scheumann, DC, USA, of the Army Medical Center was elected vice chairman.

Research and Development

Rear Adm. T. A. Solberg, USN, Chief of Naval Research, addressed the American Council on Commercial Laboratories in Washington, D. C., this week on the subject of "National Cooperation in Research and Development."

Admiral Solberg told his audience that "we are confronted with at least three problems: (1) collaboration between scientists not only in special fields but also in related fields; (2) cooperation between universities, industry, and the military; and (3) integration of research, development and production."

"Collaboration on the part of scientists," he said, "will speed new discoveries and not only build up our store of knowledge, but will provide the means for more rapid progress. Less duplication will result. Time will be saved."

Universities and industry could not exist without each other, he continued, and "without them the military would be relegated to the scrap heap." According to Admiral Solberg, "the Navy recognizes that most major developments either military or civilian have always been shouldered by industry," but, he added, "in these days of turmoil and fear and suspicion it is self evident that without the military of this country freedom of thought and industrial enterprise could not long exist. Certainly their cooperation is justified."

The Chief of Naval Research pointed out that "in order to progress... we must apply basic knowledge to get the end products," and utilize "real teamwork in science and technology."

Admiral Solberg suggested that the problems in question might be solved by the dissemination and exchange of information; by increasing the support of basic research in universities and other technical institutions; and by exchanging personnel.

"It is my earnest hope, therefore," Admiral Solberg said in his closing remarks, "that we may each and all give much thought and effort toward improving our present procedures and our present position with regard to nation-wide cooperation in research and development. And finally, that eventually there can be devised a program of national cooperation in research and development."

Marine Conference

A conference of Marine Corps officials concerned with application of the Marine Reserve (Ground) training program for 1949 was held at Headquarters, Marine Corps, this week.

Conferees included representatives of commanding generals at posts and activities where reservists will be trained, staff members of the Division of Reserve and Division of Plans and Policies at Headquarters, and several Reserve District Directors.

With an eye toward economy of time and monies, the conferees evaluated reports and recommendations based on the 1948 training program, before preparation of this year's training schedule and directives for its execution.

It is expected that a schedule of a 1949 program will be ready by 1 Jan.

The conference of officers of the regular establishment will be followed by others early in 1949 with commanding officers of the various Organized Reserve components participating. At that time, training program details will be worked out and the schedule coordinated.

Marine Corps records show that approximately 54 per cent of the Organized Reserve was committed to active duty training this year and it is expected that active duty requirements will commit 75 per cent of the Organized component in 1949.

Housing for Marines

A contract to provide 60 prefabricated houses for personnel at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, has been awarded by the Navy to the Lustron Corporation of Columbus, Ohio.

The houses, costing almost six hundred thousand dollars, will consist of 30 three-bedroom units and 30 two-bedroom units as married officers' and married enlisted men's quarters.

Sites for the houses already have been prepared by separate contract, and roads, walks, electricity, gas and sewers installed. Under the new contract the Lustron Corporation must connect the houses with these services.

The two-bedroom unit will be 35 feet wide and 31 feet deep, with a porch. The three-bedroom house will be 39 feet wide and 31 feet deep without porch. Both will be bungalow style with no cellar.

Refresher for Marine Women

Eighteen former reserve officers of the Women Marines recently selected for regular commissions will join three others already on duty at Headquarters Marine Corps next week for a week of indoctrination before assignment to regular duty stations.

Refresher lectures on Marine Corps administration and the workings of various departments at Headquarters will be added to close order drill and other basic military subjects during the week to bring the women up-to-date on the Marine Corps. Eighteen of the 21 women selected for the regulars have been in inactive status for 25 months. Only three were on continuous active duty when selected.

Navy Publishes Medals Book

A book, entitled "Decorations, Ribbons and Badges, U. S. Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, 1861-1948" has been prepared by the Navy for distribution to all ships and stations.

Regulations governing awards and eligibility lists are included in the publication along with lists of all ships and units awarded the Presidential Unit Citation and the Navy Unit Commendation. This is the first time the latter lists have been published.

New Naval Reserve Units

The Navy Department has authorized the activation of new volunteer Naval Reserve units composed of personnel trained to staff activities under the cognizance of the Bureau of Ships.

Adm. Denfeld's Anniversary

with the hope expressed by the CNO shortly after he took over his new duties.

Additional training stations for Naval Reservists were activated during 1948, bringing the total to 263. Fifty-six others have been authorized. Ships and submarines of the Reserve Fleet were assigned for use as training vessels by the Reservists, and four more Naval Air Reserve training bases were established to protect what Admiral Denfeld has referred to as "the Navy's wartime investment in training of flight and maintenance crews."

Advances in Naval aviation were also made under Admiral Denfeld's guidance. The first jet planes were successfully launched from the decks of Navy carriers, as was one of the Navy's long-range patrol-bombers, and numerous new jet aircraft were added to Navy squadrons.

As a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Denfeld was instrumental, along with the Army and Air Force members, in seeking more complete unification of the Armed Forces and the clarification of roles to be played by the individual services. The Marine Corps, for the first time, was provided the go-ahead signal for developing amphibious operation tactics, and the Air Force and Navy sought to iron out their differences over strategic bombing.

"The offensive potentialities of the Navy are inherent to the mobility of its forces," Admiral Denfeld said this week. "With the proper weapons, and with the control of the sea, we choose our point of action. This prime advantage, the choice of where and when to strike, forces an enemy to spread his defenses thin. In trying to maintain his forces every place, he cannot be strong any place."

The Navy is striving, Admiral Denfeld pointed out, "to keep in good combat readiness, adequate defensive and striking forces," and this is being accomplished by "concentrating on the development of prototype ships and weapons and utilizing the sciences . . . in the production of new instruments of war."

Navy Nurse Corps

Thirty civilian nurses have been selected to receive commissions as Ensign in the Navy Nurse Corps. Those selected reported 10 Dec. to the Naval Hospitals for indoctrination training. Two Reserve nurses will also report for this training as a part of their first active duty. They are:

Study Air Installations

The Deputy Chief of Air Installations for the U. S. Air Force, Col. Colby M. Myers, recently addressed 41 Air Installations graduates of a special engineering course of the USAF Institute of Technology, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio.

Colonel Myers emphasized the vital importance of Air Bases in U. S. air planning and the responsibility of Air Installations Officers in their key role of maintaining and developing the multi-billion dollar network of U. S. Air Installations all over the world. He further pointed out the critical need for Air Installations Officers in the USAF and the career opportunities for officers interested in this work.

Colonel Myers was introduced by Major Gen. C. B. Stone, III, Director of Supply and Maintenance for Air Materiel Command.

Lt. Col. Glenn O. Mount is Chief of the Air Installations Course.

Air Judge Advocates

The question of whether a separate promotion list will be established for Judge Advocates of the Air Force could not be answered late this week.

It is understood that the problem is under "priority" consideration by top Air Force officials.

Presumably, the issue is as follows: If the Air Force is affected by the law creating a new system of military justice for the Army, then a separate promotion list—one of the features of that legislation—is mandatory. However, if the Air Force is not included in the legislation (this is the critical point at issue) then there is no necessity for the establishment of a separate promotion list for Air Judge Advocates.

Since the new code of military justice becomes operative on 1 Feb. 1949, it is believed that an official answer to the problem will be promulgated shortly.

Tried, Tested, Approved every day for 50 years

Day in and day out, for 18,250 days, officers and enlisted men have favored Bancroft caps. Like the cap shown, for instance: easily 30% lighter than most caps, well ventilated, it's a fine fur felt. Snap-change cover, zephyr cane frame, lightweight roll gromet.

CAC Air Surgeon

Col. William P. Patient has been assigned as Air Surgeon for the newly organized Continental Air Command, it was announced by Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Commanding General, Continental Air Command, Mitchel AFB, N. Y. Colonel Patient was formerly Air Surgeon of the Fourteenth Air Force at Orlando AFB, Fla.

During World War II, Patient served as Chief Surgeon of the Alaskan Air Command, Adak, Alaska, and in the industrial medical service with the Air Materiel Command. He is presently residing at Mitchel AFB with his wife, the former Falba Gibson of San Antonio, Tex. They have one son, Miles A. Patient, 19, now attending the Military Institute at Roswell, N. M.

Two AF Generals Changed

The reassignment of two general officers was announced this week by the Air Force. Brig. Gen. Burton M. Hovey, commanding general of Headquarters Command at Bolling AFB, Washington, D. C., will become Air Attache at Buenos Aires, Argentina. Brig. Gen. Edmund C. Lynch, formerly Assistant Comptroller at USAF Headquarters, has been named chief of the Organization Division in the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations.

Shift AF Units

The U. S. Air Force has announced that three of its overseas units would be transferred soon. The 317th Troop Carrier Wing will be transferred this month from Tachikawa, Japan, to Germany in support of the Berlin airlift. The unit's personnel and Douglas C-54 aircraft, already on temporary duty with U. S. Air Forces in Europe, will rejoin the organization upon its arrival. Approximately 1,050 additional personnel will be assigned to the Wing and move to Europe with it. The complete unit will be attached to USAFE upon arrival in Germany.

The 91st Reconnaissance Squadron, with 58 officers and 330 airmen will move from Waller Air Force Base, Trinidad, to McGuire Air Force Base, Fort Dix, New Jersey, within the next 45 days. The move to McGuire will be made with equipment, including the unit's RB-17 aircraft. The 91st will be transferred from Caribbean Air Command to Strategic Air Command in connection with its return to the United States.

The 23rd Fighter Wing, with approximately 1,200 personnel, will be transferred from Guam to Howard Air Force Base, Canal Zone, next April. Dependents will accompany personnel on the movement. The 23rd is equipped with Republic F-47 Thunderbolts, but the aircraft will not be moved. The unit will be equipped with jet aircraft upon arrival in the Canal Zone.

Transfer 1260 Air Sergeants

The Air Force has ordered the transfer of 1260 master sergeants from recruiting duties, it was learned this week. The transfers were made because of the urgent need for top grade enlisted personnel with "Operations Vittles" and with other Air Force activities.

The 1260 master sergeants were in excess of the 40 per cent quota which the Air Force supplies for the combined Army-Air Force Recruiting Service. This ratio will be maintained, officials said.

Airlift Planes Near Mark

Despite advent of nasty flying weather, approximately 230 Douglas C-54 Sky-masters this week continued the relentless task of supplying Berlin by air—moving close to delivery of the 500,000th ton of food, fuel and other vital supplies.

Last month, when ground fogs made instrument flying necessary much of the time, the Douglas transport aircraft, flown by Air Force and Navy flight crews, averaged a daily lift of 3,064 tons during the first 25 days of November.

Flying the Atlantic in support of "Operations Vittles" are Douglas C-74 Globe Masters, giant transports with a design gross weight of 125,000 pounds and a top speed of nearly 300 miles an hour.

Air Force Chaplains

The Air Force published this week AFR No. 165-3, a comprehensive report on the Air Force Chaplain Program, which establishes policies and procedures for religious activities in all activities.

The Regulation declares that "The Office of Chief of Air Force Chaplains functions within the Office of Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel, Headquarters, USAF. The Chief of Air Force Chaplains serves as consultant with direct access to the Chief of Staff, USAF, on the religious life, morals, morale and related matters affecting military personnel."

The Air Force said that one chaplain will be authorized for every 775 officers and enlisted men.

The regulation charges the Chief of Air Force Chaplains with responsibility to "compute the needs for chaplains, chaplain equipment, and religious supplies, based on major air command reports, and defend the budget for these matters."

Air Force chaplains are authorized an additional 35 pounds of regular baggage allowance when traveling by air for professional equipment.

The regulation prescribes also that "a chaplain of each faith (Catholic, Jewish, Protestant) will be notified immediately at the time of an emergency landing or air crash and will proceed to the scene for the purpose of performing the necessary ministrations of his respective church."

Commands Bolling AFB

Thirty-six year old command pilot, Col. Sidney D. Grubbs of Martinsville, Ind., will assume command of Headquarters Command USAF, Bolling Air Force Base, Wednesday, 15 Dec., relieving Brig. Gen. B. M. Hovey, who will be assigned to the U. S. Embassy in Argentina as Air Attache, according to General Muir S. Fairchild, Vice Chief of Staff, USAF.

Colonel Grubbs, veteran of 85 combat missions, was commanding officer of Maxwell Air Force Base at Montgomery, Ala. Previously, he was Chief of Staff of the Air University at Maxwell, and prior to that, Secretary of the Air War College. A graduate of the U. S. Military Academy in 1933, Colonel Grubbs completed his pilot training at Randolph and Kelly Air Force Bases in Texas the following year.

B-36 in Peace Celebration

The U. S. Air Force's six-engine B-36 bomber, largest bomber in the world, flew over 10 West Virginia cities on 7 Dec. as a highlight of Peace Week celebrations in that state. Sponsored by the West Virginia Military Manpower Committee, composed of leading citizens and officials of the state, Peace Week is an annual statewide observance to promote peace through preparedness.

FLYING LST! GIANT NEW AIR TRANSPORT

NOW BUILDING AT DOUGLAS!

Vividly the Berlin Air Lift reveals the need for high-speed, large capacity transport aircraft. And to meet this need skilled engineers and craftsmen at Douglas are now producing 28 giant, all-purpose C-124A transports for the U. S. Air Force.

Two and one-half times the size (by weight) of the famed Douglas C-54, this huge plane will carry a 50,000-pound load, and can transport military cargo 1,200 miles and return to base without refueling. Novel built-in nose ramp, similar to the famous sea-going LSTs, facilitates handling of heavy ground force equipment such as tanks, field guns, bulldozers and fully loaded vehicles.

It is expected that the C-124A will enhance in every respect the quarter-century reputation of Douglas for leadership in the design and construction of the world's finest, fastest and most dependable air transports.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1948

"Mobility and versatility characterize our modern Navy in its fundamental responsibility of safeguarding our country."—VICE ADM. ARTHUR D. STRUBLE, USN.

AT the direction of the President, orders have been issued prohibiting public discussion by officials of the National Military Establishment of the forthcoming defense budget. The President placed a limiting figure of $15 billions of proposed defense expenditures for the fiscal year ending 30 June 1950. This amount includes $600 millions for stockpiling strategic materials and also the estimated cost of new legislation. In the face of official silence, supporters of National Defense can only speculate on the effect of the limitation. With costs of most items at or near an all-time high it will be impossible to maintain the Armed Forces at personnel strengths authorized by Congress and to provide other defense essentials. Drastic reductions in Army draft calls indicate such curtailment. Obviously legislation providing for the immediate establishment of Universal Military Training will have to be deferred. Construction of family quarters urgently needed at practically all stations may have to be on a reduced scale. Through economies in other items or otherwise, a way should be found to provide for the pay increases to be recommended by the Hook Commission. In this connection it should be noted that proposals for doubling the salary of the President, or greatly augmenting his expense account, and materially increasing the compensation of other civilian officials, including cabinet members are being considered. Surely the long overdue pay raises for the officers of the Armed Forces will not be overlooked. Due to the limitation on defense expenditures, programs for augmenting the combat efficiency of the Military Establishment will be reexamined in the light of availability of funds. Early attainment of a 70-group Air Force appears unlikely. It is unfortunate in view of disturbing world developments that financial considerations prevent us from building up our defense forces to the minimum strength essential to security.

THE American people, and particularly the members of the Armed Services, are gratified to learn that Secretary of State George C. Marshall is rapidly recovering from a major operation performed last Monday. In the course of a physical examination last summer a kidney disorder was discovered and surgeons recommended an immediate operation. However, the Secretary felt that his presence at the Paris sessions of the United Nations was essential and he deferred the operation until this time. With characteristic fortitude Secretary Marshall unhesitatingly placed the welfare of the nation ahead of his personal interest and deliberately jeopardized his health to serve the people. As Army Chief of Staff, as special envoy to China, and as Secretary of State, General Marshall has been under terrific tension for the past nine years. Three years ago he planned to retire to enjoy a well-earned rest. However, he was sent on a mission to China and on his return became Secretary of State. He again planned to leave public life next month, but the President was loath to lose the brilliant services of this great statesman. The esteem and affection in which he is universally held by the American people are reflected in his great prestige abroad. Mr. Truman felt it was impossible to find a replacement of comparable attainments, ability and influence. He therefore strongly urged Secretary Marshall to remain in the cabinet, and the Secretary, always a good soldier, consented to do so. Those who know his indefatigable energy, his great fighting heart, and his rugged constitution, will hope not only for his early and complete recovery, but also that he can be persuaded to take a long rest before resuming his arduous duties.

ALL who feel a sentimental attachment to American Naval traditions will applaud the announcement of the President that the battleship Missouri will remain in commission. There had been unconfirmed reports that budgetary considerations would send this great man-of-war—the last of our battleships in active service—into reserve with other capital ships now in mothballs. The President has emphatically scotched this report. The Missouri, he affirms, will continue to sail the seas, a symbol of our might in peace. The place of a battleship in future conflicts is problematical. It may still be of great service in supporting landings on hostile shores and as a great floating platform from which guided missiles may be launched against distant targets. No nation with which we might conceivably be at war in the foreseeable future possesses any battleship strength of consequence. Future fighting fleets will likely include aircraft carriers, anti-aircraft vessels, fast cruisers, destroyers, submarine killers and undersea craft. The improved sub-surface ships developed by the Germans late in the war are the prototypes of similar vessels now utilized by Great Britain, Russia and the United States. They will have an important influence on future Naval strategy. It is gratifying to note that our Navy has developed anti-submarine equipment capable of coping with such craft and of protecting our Naval and merchant vessels against underwater attack. Our principal Naval deficiency is in the number of modern long-range submarines. Our construction program for such vessels should be pressed to early completion. We will not have an imposing array of battleships in our future fleets, but traditions of the dreadnaughts will be continued by the fighting crews who man their successors. For the present at least the mighty Missouri will maintain a link with the past—a symbol both of power and of good will.

Service Humor

P. O. W.

After the Guadalcanal campaign, an Army unit which had been in action for several months was sent back to Brisbane, Australia, for rest. There a prominent manufacturer threw open the grounds of his estate to the Yanks, and invited them to what might have been termed a king-size buffet supper.

"Treat it like you treat the Japs," the host told his guests casually, waving toward tables that groaned under a massive collection of food and drink.

Later, he saw a GI attempting to cram a bottle of wine into his pocket.

"I say old boy," said the host, good-naturedly, "what are you doing?"

"Well, you said we should treat this stuff like it was Japs," the unabashed GI replied. "Me, I'm taking a prisoner."

—American Legion Magazine.

Education

The young son of a master sergeant asked: "Hey, Pop, how does electricity go through them wires?"

"Don't know," said Pop after a moment's thought. "Electricity always was a puzzle to me."

"Then, Pop, can you tell me what makes thunder and lightning?"

"Tell the truth, Son," Pop confessed, "I never did understand them things exactly myself."

"Well, then Pop," son started to ask; then, in disgust: "Oh, well, never mind."

"Aw, go ahead, Son, and ask questions; ask lots of 'em; that's the only way you're gonna learn."

—Foreign Service.

Power of Suggestion

The inductee who never stopped wiggling was being given the once over by the Psychiatrist. Suddenly he shouted, "Grass-hoppers, grass-hoppers all over me."

The doctor jumped up quickly and pushed his chair back, ordering, "Well, for heaven's sake, don't push them off on me."

—The Midnight Sun.

Costly Humor

"Since I met you I can't eat, I can't drink, I can't sleep," bemoaned the airman.

"Oh, really. Why?" asked the WAF demurely.

"Because I'm always broke," he replied.

—Scott AFB, Ill.

Women Drivers

Mama passed her driver's test, Mama's feeling regal;

She can dent a fender now,

And everything is legal!

—Cp. Carson Mountaineer.

Modern Life

"What was the name of that picture you saw at the drive-in-theatre last night?"

"I don't remember the name—it was raining. It's the first time I've ever seen Lana Turner playing opposite two windshield wipers."

—Command Courier.

Sub-normal

Ask The Journal

(This Department is maintained as a service for ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL subscribers. Please send return postage for direct reply.)

L. S. B.—The Department of the Air Force has advised us that enlisted men of the Army may apply through channels for aviation cadet training. Army Reserve officers and officers of the Regular Army must be transferred to the Air Force before they can be accepted for aviation cadet training.

J. P. D.—According to The Adjutant General's Office, temporary Army officers, on active duty with the Air Force, are subject to Department of the Army promotion regulations.

P. T.—The Adjutant General's Office has advised us that all enlisted men will be required to take MOS examinations eventually. There will be no exemptions because of length of service in grade. Examination for musicians will not be given in the near future.

D. G. B.—Air Force Manual 35-1, and AF Letter 35-86, with all amendments, are the publications which cover MOS assignments for commissioned officers, warrant officers and enlisted men.

G. W. T.—Because of the time which elapsed between the date of your discharge and your reenlistment, your date of rank must be the date of your reenlistment. To have received an earlier date of rank it would have been necessary for you to have reenlisted within ninety days after the date of your discharge.

In The Journal

One Year Ago

Secretary of the Army Royall announced the appointment of Maj. Gen. David G. Barr as Chief of the Army Advisory Group at Nanking, China, succeeding Maj. Gen. John P. Lucas.

10 Years Ago

The President yesterday revealed that he will ask additional funds for counter-espionage work next year. The chief executive said that no special unit will be set up to carry on the work but refused to reveal any further details of his plans curtailing the activities of spies.

25 Years Ago

The proposal to merge the War and Navy Departments is being vigorously opposed by the "Committee of '76." Resolutions adopted by that body call upon all "loyal patriotic voters" to petition their Congressman to work and vote against the proposed measure.

50 Years Ago

By practically a majority vote the Naval Board of Bureau Chiefs this week decided against the introduction of electrical apparatus on warships beyond their present comprehensive use in the operation of auxiliary power.

80 Years Ago

These are revolutionary times, and the change in all the conditions of attack necessitates a radical change in all the conditions of defense. Though engineers officers the world over are at work upon it, we venture our "guess" that, if the problem is solved at all, it will be by a Yankee.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Official Washington received with gratification the news of the anti-Communist victory in the municipal election in the western sectors of Berlin last Sunday. The State Department issued a statement expressing great satisfaction with the result of the balloting. Despite the refusal of the Soviet authorities to permit any votes to be cast in the Russian sector, and despite the boycott of the election by the Communists, more than 86 per cent of the million and a half qualified electors in western Berlin participated. This compares with a total vote of 90 per cent in 1946, of which the Communists as active participants polled 19 per cent.

In Sunday's election the Social Democratic party, the most vociferous anti-Communist group in Berlin, received two-thirds of the ballots, and on Tuesday the city council unanimously selected Ernst Reuter, Socialist leader, as mayor. In the meantime Russia recognized the rump Communist regime, hastily chosen last week by a selected group in the musical comedy theater in the Soviet sector, as the legal government of all Berlin. Thus the city has been effectively split between two rival municipal governments, each assuming control over about half the population.

This division of Berlin has greatly lessened, if not wholly eliminated, any chance for an early settlement of the worsening Berlin situation. It makes practically certain the necessity for the continuance of the airlift throughout the winter as the only means of getting food and fuel to western Berlin through the Soviet blockade.

Members of Congress who returned from Europe this week were warm in their praise of the efficiency of the American and British airmen in continuing their round-the-clock, all-weather food and fuel service to Berlin. They report that the outstanding success of the Allied airlift has greatly lowered the prestige of Russia throughout western Europe.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek's mission to the United States to obtain American aid for her husband's shaky Chinese government was made more difficult this week by the continued deterioration of the military situation of the nationalist armies in China. Red forces have successfully kept three army groups from uniting south of Suchow and are engaged in defeating them in detail. Both sides have received reinforcements, but the Communists retain the initiative. They have isolated 250,000 troops which recently formed the Suchow garrison. After evacuating that base the nationalist force moved south and west into a well-laid Communist trap. With this force destroyed the disintegration of other government armies north of Nanking seems probable. New government armies are being formed in Formosa, in southern China near Canton and in the southwestern provinces. It seems unlikely that these new forces will be available in time to affect the situation in North China.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek during the week visited Secretary of State George C. Marshall twice at Walter Reed Hospital and yesterday was the guest of President and Mrs. Truman at tea. Presumably she pleaded her country's cause at these conferences, but it seems unlikely that she received much encouragement. It is reported that she is requesting aid amounting to a billion dollars a year for several years. The amount granted is likely to be much smaller. There is no assurance that even the full amount requested would be sufficient to preserve the present regime in China.

In contrast to disturbing developments elsewhere, the solidarity of the western hemisphere was definitely strengthened this week. In Washington, Costa Rica deposited her ratification of the Western Hemisphere Defense Treaty negotiated at Rio de Janeiro in 1947. This is the fourteenth ratification and accounted for the necessary two-thirds of the signatories to make the pact binding on the ratifying states. Most of the remaining countries are expected to ratify the treaty soon, thus giving striking evidence of the unity of the free republics of the western world in the preservation of peace. The treaty of Rio de Janeiro binds the American countries to mutual defense against aggression. It is a natural sequel to the Monroe Doctrine, which is a unilateral declaration of policy by the United States, whereas the present treaty is a multi-lateral agreement of mutual assistance. It provides for a greater degree of collective security than has ever heretofore been achieved.

Two distinguished Latin-American visitors were received in Washington this week. One was the President of Cuba, Carlos Prio Socarras, who was met at the Washington airport by President Truman and subsequently awarded the Legion of Merit. The other guest of the nation was Foreign Minister Juan Bramuglia of Argentina, who as delegate to the United Nations took the lead in attempting a settlement of the Berlin dispute between Russia and the western powers. Unfortunately the serious illness of Secretary of State Marshall prevented his joining the President in entertaining the official guests. Secretary Marshall this week underwent a major operation for a kidney ailment, but is now recuperating satisfactorily. However, he is not likely to resume his duties for several weeks.

In Paris the General Assembly of the United Nations is preparing to adjourn to reconvene in New York on 1 April. The long session produced a great deal of oratory, but not many tangible accomplishments. Perhaps the principal achievement was in providing a forum for long debates which served to define the area of disagreement between the Russian bloc and the rest of the world.

Considerable attention was devoted by the General Assembly and the Security Council to the Palestine situation. While this question was not satisfactorily resolved there were indications of progress and some cautious optimism was expressed concerning a final settlement between the Jews and Arabs.

The United States proposed that the government of South Korea set up under the supervision of a commission of the United Nations be formally recognized. It also proposed that United States and Russian troops be withdrawn from Korea and that provision be made for adequate protection of South Korea from onslaughts of Communists from the north. In the closing days of the Paris sessions considerable attention was given this question, with the Russian bloc opposing any recognition of the South Korean government.

The United States Supreme Court by a five-to-four vote has accorded a hearing to attorneys for several Japanese leaders who contend that the international tribunal which convicted them of war crimes was illegally established. Pending the outcome of the hearing General Douglas MacArthur has deferred execution of the sentences of death and imprisonment variously imposed on the defendants. Prompt action by the Supreme Court is expected. In view of precedents there appears small likelihood that the court will find that it has any jurisdiction over the matter. Nevertheless the decision of the court to grant a hearing meets with general satisfaction, since it tends to dispel any belief that our country is acting from vengeful motives without consideration of the rights of a vanquished foe. There is a general feeling that the trials of war criminals in Germany and Japan have been dragged out much too long, and that subsequent prosecutions should be confined largely to those accused of the most flagrant atrocities.

Secretary Royall's Mission—Of first importance is the current mission to Europe and the Mediterranean which the President has entrusted to Secretary of the Army Royall. It relates to the international as well as to the military situation, including the morale of our troops. Those accompanying the Secretary have been selected with particular relation to their specialties and ability to combine their observation so that the Secretary will be able to present clear cut conclusions with respect to our policies toward the problems of Germany, Austria, and the Mediterranean, the heart of which of course is Russia. It is a matter of record that Mr. Royall has teletype conversations daily with General Clay, in some of which Secretary of Defense Forrestal and Acting Secretary of State Lovett participate, and when they are not available reports are made to them. But there are many matters that face to face discussion can clarify, and it is these which are responsible for the decision for Mr. Royall to go to Europe. Then there is the question of Greece and the disappointing failure of that Government to suppress the guerrillas in spite of the aid we have given to it in munitions and advice from our military experts. Again, the President wishes to be informed by a member of his administration in whose judgment he places confidence what has been accomplished in strengthening Turkey against communist aggression. Personal contact will enable a more satisfactory evaluation of the reports already made by our representatives in that country or of those that will come in the future. Now that the United Nations Assembly is about to adjourn with little to its record of accomplishment, unless it be that the organization is not broken up as was predicted would occur, the dispatch of a mission headed by the Secretary of the Army will demonstrate to the Western nations that we have no intention of abandoning them. At the same time we are giving notice to Russia that while continuing to seek and want peace we will not have a peace of appeasement. Moreover, we are informing our troops and their dependents that their government is watchful of their welfare. General Clay has been especially insistent that the Secretary of the Army come to Berlin and bring Mrs. Royall, for by so doing it will be shown that we have no chip on our shoulder and do not expect war. The reports Mr. Royall will make of his observations and those of his staff naturally will play an important part in the conclusions regarding our European policies which will appear in the President's message to Congress when it convenes next month. Further informed as he will be, military circles point out that Mr. Royall will be well equipped to succeed Secretary Forrestal when the latter retires from the Cabinet probably when the new administration comes into power 20 Jan.

Theft of Secret Papers—A Federal grand jury in New York and the House Committee on un-American Activities are delving into the theft of secret documents from the State Department, apparently for purposes of espionage. Microfilms of the papers were found concealed in a pumpkin on the Maryland farm of Whittaker Chambers, a former Communist. All of the documents bore dates indicating that the theft occurred in 1938, and all were classified for security purposes. Since they were largely cables and radio messages originally sent in code, their use might have compromised the security of cryptographic codes. However, all diplomatic and military codes have been changed several times since the date of the documents. Apparently all the papers were taken from the State Department, though some are said to pertain to the Navy.

Enlisted Men on Courts Martial—The provision of the new law making enlisted men eligible for service as members of courts martial at the request of the accused is regarded by many as an experiment of doubtful value. It is believed to have been adopted as a result of a misconception of the nature of courts martial. They are not the equivalent of juries in civil courts; they are more nearly comparable to panels of judges. The members, therefore, should be specially trained and qualified for their duties. Furthermore to require an enlisted man to pass judgment on a fellow-soldier with whom he may be closely associated in a military organization is to impose on him a disagreeable and often embarrassing responsibility which he should not be called upon to assume.

Navy Selection Board Forces Retirements—One hundred and sixty-two Naval captains will retire from the Navy during the next seven months, according to figures completed by the Bureau of Naval Personnel following the report of the Board for the selection of Rear Admirals.

The entire group of officers have completed at least thirty years' of Naval service, and will be forced to retire between now and 30 June 1949 due to their failure twice to be selected for promotion by Navy selection boards. Some of the officers are expected to request retirement prior to next June, while others may become incapacitated before that time and retire on physical disability. The remainder, however, will be forced to retire on that date.

Only four of the twenty-four officers selected last week for promotion to the rank of Rear Admiral fell within the promotion zone. Five of the group were senior to the promotion zone, and the remaining fifteen were selected from below the zone.

Of a total of 90 in the promotion zone, 86 failed of selection for the first time. These 86, if by-passed by the next selection board convened to recommend promotions to the rear admiral rank, will be retired on or before 30 June 1950.

Army Medical Corps—Col. Clifford V. Morgan took his duties recently as Deputy Chief Surgeon, European Command. He replaces Brig. Gen. G. V. Emerson, who left EUCOM in August to retire. Colonel and Mrs. Morgan, accompanied by their son, Walter, arrived in Bremerhaven 20 Nov. Their other two sons are remaining in the United States to attend Cornell and Nebraska Wesleyan Universities.

Prior to going to EUCOM, Colonel Morgan was Deputy to Maj. Gen. George C. Beach, Commanding General of the Army Medical Center in Washington, D. C. This is Colonel Morgan's second assignment in Europe. During World War II he served as Deputy General Purchasing Agent at Headquarters, European Theater of Operations. He is a former Executive Officer of Crile General Hospital in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Transportation Corps—Changes in key personnel assignments at two EUCOM Transportation Division installations have been announced by Headquarters, European Command. Col. Joseph H. Grant, Chief of the Administrative Branch of the Transportation Division, will assume command of the 7719 EUCOM Transportation Training Center at Hammelburg. Prior to his present assignment with EUCOM, Colonel Grant was stationed at the New York Port of Embarkation. Col. E. F. She was appointed a Lieutenant Colonel in the Regular Army in 1947 and held the position of Chief Nurse at the Ft. Jay Station Hospital since June of 1946.

Army Bands—A quarterly allowance of $45 for the maintenance of a musical library for a 28-piece band has been authorized by the Army. A 56-piece band is entitled to $90 a quarter for this purpose. A 28-piece ORC band may obtain $22.50 and a 56-piece ORC band is eligible for $45. The Army said that an initial allowance of $200 to all Army and ORC bands for the purchase of band music will be made after activation has been authorized.

Army Safety Program—In Special Regulations No. 385-10-60, the Army has instructed that within limits of funds available, maximum use will be made of safety posters, films, technical publications and other safety educational and promotional materials in order to create and maintain interest in the prevention of accidents and publicize current accident causes.

The 1403d will be commanded by Col. William R. Macleod, at the present time Chairman of the English Department at the High School of Music and Art in New York City.

Each General Staff division has been authorized the services of eight National Guard officers.

Immediately prior to coming to the Pentagon, Colonel Holland was stationed at Chicago as Provost Marshal for the Fifth Army. In the early days of 1942 he was the Provost Marshal, USASOS, Southwest Pacific Area, in Australia and New Guinea. Assigned to Field Artillery after graduation from West Point in 1927, Colonel Holland had served as Assistant Provost Marshal during the Louisiana maneuvers and as Provost Marshal of the Third Army. He was one of the first Field Officers assigned to the newly organized Corps of Military Police in 1942.

The purpose of the new organization, Colonel Goriup states, is to foster cooperation in pharmaceutical matters throughout the western hemisphere.

Army Communications—Message processing in the Department of the Army is being delayed by overclassification as to security and by misuse of precedence designations. The General Staff Communications Office reports also that verbosity is increasing the workload of communicators. Effective 1 Jan. 1949, new precedence designations will go into effect.

FINANCE*Financial Digest

The quarterly report of the Department of Agriculture on fall planting of winter wheat and prospective planting of spring wheat indicates that the 1949 yield may equal or exceed the bumper crop of 1948. The acreage planted this fall exceeds by ten per cent that recommended to the farmers by the department. Another near-record wheat harvest in this country, coupled with good yields in foreign countries, would mean a heavy carryover, a decline in grain exports, curtailed farm income and reduced food cost. It would also indicate heavy Government expenditures in the farm price support program.

Steel production in the United States last week reached the new record of the equivalent of 1,804,300 net tons of ingots and castings, surpassing the previous all-time high of 1,791,700 tons, established during the week of 13 November of this year. With a continued assured supply of ore and scrap the steel mills are expected to keep producing at full capacity throughout 1949. Barring labor troubles this should insure enough steel for motor plants, machinery, and construction needs to reduce substantially the heavy backlog of orders.

Christmas shopping continues to lag well behind that of a year ago. There is some evidence of increased holiday buying this week and there is some hope that late shoppers may bring the volume of business nearly up to last year's total. Some merchants are adopting the unusual procedure of announcing pre-Christmas sales to reduce heavy inventories of slow-moving items. The disappointing holiday business is being reflected in the caution with which buyers for large stores are placing orders for spring goods. The trend appears to be toward carrying smaller stocks of luxury goods and expensive apparel.

MERCHANT MARINE*Merchant Marine

Foreign vessel tonnage moving through U. S. ports in September was some 247,000 tons greater than the American merchant fleet total, according to a recent report of the Census Bureau. Foreign fleets moved 8,117,000 tons through these ports, compared with 7,870,000 tons for U. S. ships.

Casualty returns for October, compiled by the Liverpool Underwriters' Association, show that 603 vessels, of 500 gross tons and upwards, met with casualties as compared with 550 vessels in September, although a total of 627 vessels lost were reported in October of 1947. The total losses in October included one motor-vessel of 551 tons gross, and five steamers, of 6,080 tons against two motor-vessels of 1,052 tons and five steamers of 8,732 tons in October, 1947, and ten steamers of 18,445 tons in October, 1946. Floating mines in Norwegian fjords and inlets have caused alarm in recent weeks, according to the Norwegian Information Service. They are believed to be due to the increasingly turbulent weather in the North Atlantic.

Six former landing-ship tanks are now being reconverted for the Shell Caribbean Petroleum Company to carry crude oil in Venezuelan waters. The work is being done by the Todd Shipyards Corporation Brooklyn plant and is about half finished, it is reported. Conversion of the LST's is extensive and calls for radical alterations from their wartime outline. Scheduled for work is the addition of a new bulkhead, superstructure, bridge and smoke-stack aft. A new forward mast is also being installed, and the bow openings sealed up permanently. The former tank landing craft have already been renamed. No. 137 became the LAURA; 180, the LEONA; 198 the LIRIA; 319 the LUCIA, and 345, the LUISA.

Physical Exams Postponed

The Army and Air Force have announced that the annual physical examination of officers and warrant officers—except for pilots who have passed their 40th birthday—will not be given during 1949.

In Circular 375 and AF Letter 160-13, the Services said that during the period of suspension of the annual physical examination, commanding officers and medical officers will devote particular

RCA Elects Officers

The Board of Directors of the Radio Corporation of America at its regular meeting 3 Dec., upon the recommendation of Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, Chairman of the Board, elected Frank M. Folsom as President of the Radio Corporation of America, effective as of 1 Jan. 1949.

Mr. Folsom, Executive Vice President in Charge of RCA Victor Division, has administered the far-flung production and merchandising activities of RCA for the past five years.

At the same meeting, John G. Wilson, Vice President and General Manager in Camden, was elected Executive Vice President in Charge of the RCA Victor Division, succeeding to the post filled by Mr. Folsom.

General Sarnoff, who has occupied both the offices of President and Chairman of the Board of the Radio Corporation of America since the retirement in 1947 of the late General James G. Harbord, continues as Chairman of the Board and will remain Chief Executive Officer of the RCA, as well as Chairman of the Board of the National Broadcasting Company and RCA Communications, Inc., both wholly owned subsidiaries of RCA.

Mr. Folsom served in the Air Service, USA, in the First World War and was one of the first industrialists to enter Government service prior to World War II. He joined the National Defense Advisory Commission upon its formation on 1 July 1940 as Assistant Coordinator of Purchases. He continued in that position through 1941, when the Secretary of the Navy appointed him a special assistant to the Under Secretary of the Navy and Chief of Procurement. He also served as Chairman of the Procurement Policy Board of the WPB, which was the coordinating agency for procurement policy of all war services and agencies. Mr. Folsom is President of the Navy Industrial Association.

Mr. Wilson served as a captain in the Coast Artillery in the first World War.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE Secretary of the Treasury has approved regulations governing the appointment of licensed officers of the U. S. Merchant Marine as Commissioned Officers, Chief Warrant Officers and Warrant Officers in the Coast Guard.

Officials expect that the first officers obtained under this program will be on active duty prior to 1 June 1949. Applicants must be male citizens of the United States, at least 21 but not more than 39 years of age; not less than five feet six inches or more than six feet four inches in height; have served four or more years aboard a United States vessel in the capacity of a licensed officer and be able to pass appropriate examinations.

Appointments will be made in ranks or specialties appropriate to the qualifications and experience of the applicants. All successful candidates will serve a two year probationary term in the Coast Guard, during which time the commission may be revoked if services are unsatisfactory.

Memorial Chapel
Contributions for construction of a $450,000 Memorial Chapel at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., already are being received. Coast Guard officials reported this week. Among early donations was a gift of $100 from members of the class of 1928, with other classes also planning to contribute.

Comdr. James C. Wendland, former

Auxiliary Director of the 9th Coast Guard District, is serving as Executive Secretary of the Memorial Chapel Fund. He said that committees are being established throughout the United States to conduct the drive for funds for the Inter-Faith Memorial Chapel.

The Lake Ontario Committee, under chairmanship of Mr. Harold L. Field of Rochester, N. Y., has raised its quota from $10,000 to $25,000 and at a dinner meeting last month raised over $1,000.

Civic leaders of New London, Conn., attended a similar dinner this week, at which Mr. Earle W. Stamm, president of the National Bank of Commerce, presided. New London's quota is $15,000.

Enlisted Promotions

A total of 404 enlisted men were promoted to petty officer third class, second class and first class from 16 Oct. to 15 Nov. Of this number, 126 were to petty officer, third class, 184 second class and 94 to first class.

Coast Guard officials this week reported receipt of a comprehensive plan demonstrating the effective use of mobile radio stations under simulated disaster conditions, initiated and conducted by the Communications Section, 3d District. This training is being encouraged, especially with a view toward utilizing facilities and personnel of the Coast Guard Auxiliary and effecting liaison with the Red Cross and other agencies.
